THE VERDICT

Turner and Peck Acquitted; Miner and Redell Guilty as Charged—The Jury Unable to Agree as to the Others.

WASHINGTON, September 11.—At 10:10 a. m. the Star route jury returned the court room, and, through their foreman, reported to the court that they had reached a conclusion as to four of the defendants, but that they stood as to the others, being unable to agree as to them. The court declined to receive the verdict, and took a recess until 2 p. m.

In Detail. WASHINGTON, September 11.—That public curiosity in the result of the Star route trial has not abated was shown by the large crowd which thronged the court room this morning. Messrs. Miner, Redell, Turner, Vail, and J. W. Dorey were in attendance, and the judge, having taken his seat, the session of Friday closed and the session of Monday was entered upon. The plan contemplated the withdrawal of the report was made Saturday—decided as to four of the defendants and not able to agree as to the others.

Mr. Ingersoll requested the court to inquire whether there was any prospect of the jury reaching a conclusion. This the court refused to do, stating that was a matter about which the jury might deliberate.

He was not willing to discharge them yet. He was unwilling to enforce the barbarism of the law by starving the jury. They could have water to drink, food to eat, and a place to rest.

Foreman Dickson.—We have fully discussed every point presented by your honor as to what the contrary and the facts presented by the evidence.

The Court.—None of you are authorized to make statements now. After discussion comes deliberation. You have announced to the court that you have discussed the whole case. I have no doubts you have been deliberating, but you have not reached a conclusion as to the whole case. It is in the power of the court to accept such a verdict as you are prepared to render now, but the importance of the issue, the great amount of labor and money and time and care expended in the trial of this case, renders it very important that, if possible, you should render a complete verdict on all the defendants. I do not wish to give you binding instructions even as to that. I will try you once more.

Foreman Dickson (resigned).—We will accept with respectful resignation, to the court. The court stated that he did not wish to be understood by his last remark as promising to discharge the jury at 2 o'clock, to which hour a recess was taken.

A Partial Verdict Accepted. WASHINGTON, September 11.—At 2:05 p. m. the jury returned and through the foreman reported that they were unable to agree. The court stated that it had come to the conclusion to accept a partial verdict. The roll of defendants was called and all answered "Guilty." The jury rendered a verdict of acquittal as to Turner and Peck, and as to the others they were unable to agree.

Flattering Reports of Republican Gains from all Points—Will They Hold Out?

PORTLAND, Me., September 11.—At 11:30 this morning the tallies show that one quarter of the city vote has been counted, standing: Republican, 983; fusion, 715. Republican majority, 268. The city republican majority for governor in 1880 was 185, so the present majority indicates a substantial gain.

At Calais, the election is progressing quietly with a full vote. Robie will carry the city by from 300 to 400 majority. At Bangor, the indications are that the voting is nearly two to one in favor of Robie. The republicans will probably elect representatives to the legislature, although there is strong opposition.

THE DAILY NEWS

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1882. MAINE speaks to-day, and one can not but wish for a republican victory over the democratic-greenback coalition—a disreputable fusion for power at the expense of principle.

A PITTSBURG dispatch says the executive committee of the league "after a long discussion" declared the charges of Editor McClure, that Condon had been paid to sell out the league vote to the Cameronites, to be unfounded. It is rather queer that it should take "a long discussion" to reach that kind of a conclusion.

THAT Saturday brush in Egypt appears to have staggered the British. The Arabs came on in fine style, their artillery, as it has been from the beginning, being unexpectedly well served. They fought bravely and gave the British pretty nearly more than they could attend to for a while. If they do this well in the open, they must be able to do better when driven out of Tel-el-Kehir where the desert ends, and the delta country begins. They will there have canals without count, and other obnoxious natural features which will cripple and distress an enemy at every advance.

JUDGE WYLIE deserves well of his country. It remains for lawyers to pass upon the quality of his professional work in the Star route trial; laymen can bear testimony to the ugly honesty he has shown, the many impatience with which he has brushed aside the web of technicalities, through the meshes of which dishonesty sought escape; the grim determination with which he has hung to the truth in this business as he saw it—in nothing better emphasized than in his dealing with the jury since charging it with the case. It came in Saturday evening. Judge Wylie then said he thought he would have to administer the common law in all its purity, which looked the jury up without light or fire, or any of the comforts of civil society, until a verdict was reached, and he instructed the marshal to "take the jury to its own room and detain it as other juries are until a verdict is reached." At two in the afternoon, the jury sent word that it had nothing to say, and recess was again taken this until morning. An exchange remarks that no twelve men ever had a greater opportunity to do a lasting good or mischief than the Star-route jury in making up its verdict. This seems to us to have added force in the face of the strenuous efforts of the court, which has, almost in so many words told the jury that the crime had been proved; to say nothing of those attempts at bribery, which however we postpone for future consideration, will be seen to see this case decided with our reference to them.

REFORM for the civil service is coming from generalities to particulars. The circular signed by so many hundred prominent men of Massachusetts, giving notice that they consider the thing to be of the first importance, and will so cast their ballots, is a long step forward. For some time, a year or so, indications of the approach of this subject, as an issue, have appeared in the respectful consideration politicians have been wont to give it. What they have said has probably not meant much, but it has been respectful. They no longer call it "civil service reform," nor hold it the theme for gibes and sneers. It has ceased to be "funny" and the stage of progress has been reached, which professes that the way only is the thing sought for, that there must be a reform in service conceded. How shall that reform be inaugurated? is now the question. Mr. Blaine at Waterville, Maine, in a speech the other day favored a certain tenure, say seven years, in which a man could not be put out of office, and after that could not stay in. He objected to a life term as belonging to "royalty" and as involving a pension list. As we see it now, we do not agree to either proposition. Pensioning does not follow practical life-service in private business. On the other hand, long years of employment with sure pay are taken as evidence that a sufficiency has been laid by for a rainy day. As to it belonging to "royalty," that seems to us nonsense, neither more nor less. We had it practically for over a half century in this republic previous to Jackson's administration, while "royal" England existed under her thousand years of kingship down to 1855, and as our own, stained by murder as it is, and not until 1870 did "royal" England succeed in thoroughly uprooting it and planting a system of appointment on merit and service on good behavior. We have not, however, any set plan, and would like to have discussion and examination and then adoption; and have it quickly.

On Saturday, Lon Giles, a Kokomo desperado, struck a man named Ockomo with a sandbag. Ockomo was injured seriously. An effort is being made for the organization of a public library for the parkingtons of New Albany, to be accessible also to all other citizens. Mrs. Martha Bradley died on Friday, at the home of her grandson, Henry Cook, near Ellettsville, in Hancock county, at the extreme age of 102. The State convention of the Young Men's Christian Association will meet in Wabash, October 23d, 24th and 25th. A large attendance is expected. Last night, Frank Sweeney, a noted Kokomo rough, entered the house of Charles Sumner, and tried to outrage Sumner's wife, but was frustrated. The democrats of Morgan county met in convention at Martinsville on Saturday, and isorized the ticket make by the nationals a few days since. The Wabash city council has appropriated $500 for the purpose of having a care of the streets, with a view to constructing water-works. The republican joint-representative convention of Hancock and Madison met on Saturday, at Pendleton, and nominated Henry Marsh, of Hancock county. A hotel thief stole a valuable gold watch and chain and a staff from Wm. R. Tucker, of Rye, while he was sleeping in the St. Nicholas hotel at Lafayette the other night. Last night, John Coyle, a saloon-keeper of Kokomo, got into a brawl with two surgeons, noted criminals. One of the surgeons drew a knife and cut Coyle severely. The safe of B. Spratt & Sons, at Oaktown, Knox county, was blown to pieces Friday night. The noise aroused the town, and the burglars were compelled to fly for their lives. Miss Adessa S. J. C. Wray, better known as Ida Wray, the equestrienne, has sued Lewis H. Owen and wife, of Brownstown, for defamation of character, claiming $10,000 damages. The State prohibition camp meeting at Muncie was held yesterday. Col. John W. Ray, of Indianapolis, spoke in the forenoon to an estimated audience of three thousand people. Mrs. Rachel Flaherty attended the Thurgood meeting at Charlestown on Thursday. She is over 100 years of age, and in 1817 attended a ball at Charlestown in the old Sheehy hotel. COMPULSORY VACCINATION.

Dr. Hibbard, of Richmond, Declines to Enforce the Law on the Subject—Trouble Ahead.

Dr. James F. Hibbard, health officer of Wayne county, has issued a circular to the school boards, township trustees and teachers of Wayne county, from which the following is an extract:

For sometime past evidence has been accumulating that the people of Wayne county are not ready for compulsory vaccination, and the county board of education, meeting held September 1, having unanimously advised that the regulations for the vaccination of the pupils of the schools can not be enforced without seriously marred the welfare of the schools, therefore, notices hereby given that the health authorities of the county will make no further effort to execute the rules and regulations for the vaccination of the school population of the county heretofore promulgated.

Abandoning compulsory vaccination must not be construed to signify that vaccination is an esteemed less efficacious.

It is probable that this circular may provoke some unpleasantness. Already about eighty per cent of the school children of the county have been vaccinated, and should other county health officers be moved to follow the lead of Dr. Hibbard, there would be for the present but little effect throughout the state. It is suggested that schools therefore, health officers should take Dr. Hibbard's action into consideration, to ascertain from what source he derives authority to set aside its definite regulations, the law providing that the county commissioners, in their capacity as health officers, should have in connection with the state health board. This independent action of Dr. Hibbard's looks as though an effort was making to cripple the state board in the exercise of its authority, and it is likely there will be some trouble. According to the law it is not the duty of the teachers or trustees to enforce the law, but simply to report its infraction. Enforcement is the duty of the health authorities and the state board has never as yet ordered prosecution.

What will become of the plaids of last year? A—Almost entirely given way to stripes and diagonals for general use. For trousers a modest stripe will be all the rage.

The display of standards in fine clay worsteds for double-breasted frocks was very large, also noticeably large was the line of cloth-faced diagonals and crepes. From the increased attendance up to the noon hour, the present season's opening bids fair to surpass any one yet given in general interest.
